We mainly deal with movies which are predominantly in the action genre and have little or no dialogue. MHC-dependent alloreactive T cell responses are commonly controlled by clonal selection, but in some cases, clonal expansion and even cytokine production are mediated by other pathways. Two distinct fates often follow CD4+ T cell activation in the presence of class II MHC molecules. In many cases, T cells become unresponsive or hyporesponsive. In other cases, T cells become activated, sometimes vigorously, but fail to acquire full effector function. Various experiments and theoretical considerations have suggested that this unresponsiveness or hyporesponsiveness to class II MHC molecules might result from CD4+ T cell clonal selection, possibly by clonal deletion. Such clonal deletion or negative selection has been noted in some in vitro assays, in studies of adoptive transfer experiments in mice and in studies of alloreactive T cell responses in man. These effects might be caused by the action of cytokines such as transforming growth factor-beta (TGF-beta) or Fas ligand, but have not been confirmed in T cells responding to class II MHC alloantigens in vitro, nor have studies been reported in which such clonal selection has been demonstrated by directly detecting T cell clonality. It has also been suggested that clonal selection 6d1f23a050
